London, November 20.—Article 9 of the treaty of March 30th, 1856, is still regarded as a barrier to war, especially when it is considered in connection with the protocol of April 23d, of the same year. This article is explained by the protocol. It requires the reference of questions which may arise to friendly Powers, as a preliminary to any act of hostility. It will be noticed that an overtact, not a declaration however hostile it may be in tone, is necessary to constitute a breach of the treaty. The overt act is still wanting. Prussia, in case of a revision of the treaty of Paris, will consent to no restriction on the free action of the Czar.
